

Time Machine

By Richard Lun

Age 7

If there were ever anything called a time machine, it would be awesome. You could go back to the time when George Washington was alive. And you could travel to the future, too.

One day a boy named Bob dreamed he traveled in a time machine called G01. He went to New York in the year of 9909. He saw a robot named Derek. Derek was wandering around Center Street because he had just lost his job. Bob bumped into Derek's backpack. Derek told Bob that he had lost his job, and Bob wanted to help him. Derek explained to Bob that his circuits were broken. Bob took Derek to the Robot Hospital. The robot nurse fixed Derek's circuits in two weeks. Bob told Derek about his time machine, G01. Derek wanted to go with Bob to the year of 1776. Bob said, "Yes, you can come with me." Bob and Derek traveled in time machine G01 back to 1776. Bob and Derek met American soldiers who needed help to fight the British troops. Derek told Bob that he would love to help fight the British. Bob asked the soldiers to take them to George Washington. George Washington said, "You can help with sailing the boat to cross the Delaware and fight in the Battle of Trenton." Derek said, "OK," and completed the tasks very nicely. The British troops were defeated and sailed away from America. Without the time machine, Derek wouldn't have been able to travel back to 1776 to help George Washington. Time machines will be great if they ever get invented.